

Michigan Files a Protest Against Notre Dame Players

Ann Arbor Authorities Object to Dimmick, Mathews and Philbrook, and Will Cancel Saturday's Game If These Men Insist Upon Playing—How Fielding Yost Coaches His Team—Great Expert Believes in Keeping Players in Good Humor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., November 2—Unless Notre Dame disqualifies three of its players whose names are included in the list received here yesterday, there is a possibility that the Michigan-Notre Dame football game scheduled for next Saturday will be played. Even the authorities do not agree to a compromise, in order not to leave a vacancy in the schedule, the trouble that has been precipitated in a severance of athletic relations between Michigan and Notre Dame.

Michigan is still working for the game and Coach Yost is very much on the job. The football authority here has very strong ideas as to the way a team should be developed. He strongly believes in keeping the players in the best of spirits. Yost was seen setting near the store in the lobby of the Lake House, carelessly rolling a stogie from one corner of his mouth to the other.

By this time the spirit of the occasion had dawned upon the men and they sang to the tune of "Arrawannah." Michigan's cheerleaders were true to you, Dear old Michigan. We'll sing your praise through college And we'll drink a toast to the men of Yost.

After one of the greatest athletic battles ever seen in this vicinity, the New York Athletic Club emerged victorious, 10 points to 0, in the indoor championships, held under the auspices of the A. U. U. of the Irish-American Athletic Club, which was second, defeated the Travers Island organization in the outdoor championships at New Orleans two weeks ago, but the Celtic Park Club was handicapped both Monday and last night by the absence of some of its star performers.

Both games scheduled to be played in the Junior Eagle Athletic League football tournament were forfeited yesterday. In the 85-pound class the Mohawks defeated the Pilgrims because of not having a complete team at the starting time. The New Lots Playgrounds team was credited with a game on forfeit because the Iona A. C. failed to appear.

Massachusetts Golf Team To Get Complimentary Dinner

Players Who Won the Lesley Cup From the New York Golfers to Be Entertained by Their Association—Metropolitan and Pennsylvania Teams to Be Invited—Professional Golfers Have Maintained Their High Standard of Play.

Massachusetts golf enthusiasts are not likely to readily forget the honor their team did them this year in taking from the New York players the Lesley-Cup. The Massachusetts association is planning to honor the winning team by giving it a complimentary dinner on Friday evening, November 11. Circular letters to this end are flooding the Boston golfers, and it is expected that this will attract to most, there is likely to be a real lively response.

It is also planned to have Herbert Jacobs, vice president of the U. S. G. A. and many other prominent golfers present. The victorious Massachusetts team was made up of H. H. Wilder, captain; R. W. Whittemore, J. G. Anderson, R. Tuckerman, Percival Gilbert, A. G. Lockwood, F. C. Davidson, T. M. Clafin, H. Schmidt, T. R. Fuller, T. G. Stevenson and Rodney W. Brown.

Due to the maintained brilliancy of the old guard and the coming to light of a younger element, the Massachusetts team this year well maintained its standard. Than Alex Smith and J. J. McDermott no two players have been more in the limelight during the season. Smith, captain of the professional team, has been playing even better than ever, if such a thing were possible in a player who seemed to have got the game of golf down to perfection.

Without a doubt the Wykasygl professional at the present moment is the best player in the country, meaning by that the national title, which he has held for a year to the other. Smith has added many remarkable achievements to his already brilliant record in the season. He has won 50 to 57 and the struggle went 99 inings. To-night Landerback will meet Garnaas.

Brooklyn Team Selected for National Tournament—League Games in Other Cities. A team to represent Brooklyn in the national three-cushion league has been selected. The players will be D. Landerback, J. E. Hocking, A. L. Garau and F. E. Cavanagh.

Billiard Players Active. Two games in the three-cushion tournament now in progress at the Knickerbocker Billiard Academy were played last evening. In the first, Hocking defeated F. E. Cavanagh in 88 innings, the score being 60 to 28. The winner made a high run of 7 and the loser a high run of 1. The second contest resulted in a victory for Dave Landerback. The National Amateur Billiard League, has been playing even better than ever, if such a thing were possible in a player who seemed to have got the game of golf down to perfection.

Lucky Brooklyn Hunter Bags a Near-Record Moose

One of the luckiest hunters in the Maine woods this year was E. J. Fort, who is chief engineer of the power department of this borough and who lives at 48 East Seventeenth street, Flatbush. Mr. Fort is an ardent sportsman and while he disclaims any intention of being a champion, he has several trophies that at least prove him to be an excellent hunter.

As a result of his northern trip this year, Mr. Fort will soon receive from Boston a moose head that shows the animal that he bagged was one of the best specimens of his tribe. At the present time the head is being treated by a taxidermist of the Hub city, and when it is finished, it will be a trophy of which any sportsman might well be proud. The moose that Mr. Fort got is said to be one of the largest that has ever killed in the Maine district, and that means practically that it is one of the largest ever shot in the United States, for Maine is the home of the kings of the species.

The web of one horn is 19 inches wide, of the other 17 1/2; the head has 28 "points." The antlers are beautifully symmetrical and are remarkable for their unusually heavy brow antlers, the short horns that point forward. On most moose there are perhaps of the size of hoe handles; on Mr. Fort's moose they measure 9 1/2 inches in circumference. The "bell," that curious appendage to the throat of a moose, is also unusual in this specimen. Ordinarily the bell is circular in section, with perhaps a slight enlargement at its lower end. In this moose, however, the bell is a great flat pouch, 14 inches wide and 18 inches long. The head is very long from nose to antlers, and is beautifully colored and furred down to the very lip. In fact, the moose is of the type seen usually in Alaska only.

Mr. Fort says the moose was shot on Friday, October 21, about noon. The party had been at Second Lake, in one of the K. P. hunting camps, and had started out hunting toward Front Pond about eight miles, through bog and swale country. Mr. Fort was in advance, with Vinal Gray of Fregate Isle, the guide, when he saw the moose through the woods. Until the animal lifted his head, Mr. Fort could not tell whether it was a bull or a cow. When he saw him clearly, he fired, striking him in the neck and breaking the spine. The moose turned his head and a second shot, which also struck in the neck, proved fatal. He measured 7 feet 6 inches at the shoulder and Mr. Fort said would scale 1,400 pounds. The place where he was shot was so inaccessible that it took three days to get the moose to Patton, whence he was shipped.

Mr. Fort was first in the polo vault for the title. It was thought that one of the contestants in this event had been seriously hurt for a time, but a doctor's examination proved that the only trouble was a dislocated shoulder. The man was J. N. Byers, of Yale University. The defeat of Sheppard in the 600-pound weight class was a double surprise. He was not expected to be in the past, being termed the king of middle distance, got mixed up with another kind of a kingship at the close of the Coney Island season and he has not been the same class athlete since. Lawson Robertson was confident in his right that "Shep" would win the race he was in, but history repeated itself, and Gissing took first honors. Hearty, however, did have an easy task, as Sheppard set a killing pace and the clockers got the men at 1:14 for the distance, time which equals the indoor mark. Three defeats by Gissing, one at New Orleans and two at the Garden, proves that Sheppard has either gone back or that he is entirely out of condition.
