

GREENWICH GOLF TODAY.

Marston, White, and Other Stars Are on Strong Entry List.

According to the list of entries for the Greenwich invitation golf tournament, which will begin at 9 o'clock this morning over the favorite Connecticut course, the affair will rank as high as most of the other club tourneys on the Fall schedule. Max R. Marston, New Jersey champion, runner-up to Oswald Kirkby in the Metropolitan, and now somewhat estranged from New York by reason of his allegiance to the Quakers in the recent Lesley Cup matches, has signified his intention of entering. D. E. Sawyer is another low handicap man who will play in this tourney, although he has not participated in other recent events. Gardiner W. White of Nassau, Grant A. Peacock of Garden City and Princeton, and Sam J. Graham, of the home club, will also make it especially interesting should they meet in the final or semi-final round. Henry J. Topping is in charge of the tourney and will enter. Others include J. Simpson Dean, the Princeton giant of the links; F. C. Newton, who won the Staten Island championship; E. C. Beall, of Uniontown, Penn.; Quentin C. Feitner, of South Shore; H. P. Bingham, National; A. E. Ranney, Howard Maxwell, Jr., Nassau; George A. Dixon, Jr., and C. E. Van Vleck.

The first and second rounds will be contested tomorrow, leaving Saturday for the semi-final rounds.

Metropolitan women are still playing in their series of one-day invitation affairs, and this afternoon the Upper Montclair club will be hosts to the fair sex. This series of women's events has continued for nearly two months, and even the hard, driving rains on several of the dates have not prevented the women from turning out in large numbers.

The annual classic for the golfers in the stationers' trade will be played tomorrow at Richmond, Va. A good delegation of stars from the New York district will leave today for the Southland in an endeavor to wrest the cup from the Western stationers in the tournament.
