There is more than one good reason why Milshire's taste is smoother and milder—why it mixes better. Finer herbs and berries—the choicest the world provides. The purest grain spirits science can produce. A finer process—the old English pot-still method. Above all—the artistry of master distillers who have devoted a lifetime to making Milshire America's finest dry gin. Let your taste be the judge. One sip—and you have made a friend for life.

When the foursomes gather after the match, and the orders go in for the long, tall drinks . . . notice how often you hear the request—"Make mine with Canada Dry."

For the flavor and sparkle of this fine, old ginger ale are famous throughout the land . . . The Champagne of Ginger Ales . . . thirst-quencher and mixer supreme!

And where can you find the equal of Canada Dry? Ever sparkling . . . subtly dry . . . as mellow as a vintage wine. Of course, it makes a difference. In a long, tall drink or in a refreshing glass alone, it must be Canada Dry. And there's really no point in a substitute, for Canada Dry costs no more than ordinary ginger ales . . . Try Canada Dry's Sparkling Water if you like an extra-lively water with long-lasting sparkle.

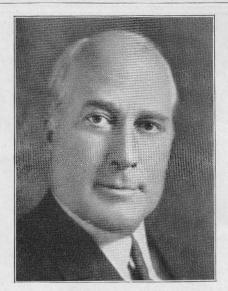

Canada Dry is also made to order by the glass at soda fountains.

Arthur T. Murray, Managing Director

Merion Leads Way In World of Sports

By Robert W. Lesley President, Merion Cricket Club

IN 1865, just after the termination of the Civil War, fifteen young men founded the Merion Cricket Club. The dues were $2.00 a year. They played cricket on Colonel Owen Jones' lawn and had for their dressing room a space around the pump at Wynnewood School. A little green box in the entry way of the old school house was the locker room for bats, wickets and balls. At that time cricket was the main sport among Philadelphia athletes and several other Clubs were in existence. English traditions and Victorian standards accompanied the growth of cricket in Philadelphia. It was not until 1873 after post war luxury had made its appearance that, with the growth of cricket and of cricket members, ground was purchased at Ardmore where a small comfortable house was built. In 1879 tennis, a new game, was introduced by Merion ladies and, later on, more ground was secured and a ladies' and juniors' club house was built. In 1892 when Allen Evans, the Vice-President, and A. J. Cassatt, the President, and a group of men including Clement A. Griscom' and William P. Henzey, decided that the Club and neighborhood needed a larger home and better facilities they purchased a tract of twelve and one-half acres with two houses on it at Haverford, now the present site of the main club house. They then created by alterations and improvements the first country club house or neighborhood club house that Merion ever had. This first house burned down in January 1896 and again in the period of its reconstruction in September 1896, and was finally rebuilt in 1897.

In these early days many cricket matches with foreign teams were played, such as Lord Hawkes' team, Prince Ranjitsinshi's team, Cambridge University's eleven, Australian eleven and the Marylbone Cricket Club.

The Victorian and Quaker influences of the period made it seem necessary to separate the sexes so the new club house had plenty of doorways; so many in fact, that it was almost a house of doors and in order to emphasize the necessity of separation of the sexes a brass rail, now abandoned, was put on the porch so that they could not trespass on each other's preserves.

In the late 1880's golf began to make its appearance on the Griscom Estate and other private estates and the Philadelphia Country Club constructed a small course as did the Devon Hotel at Devon. The Merion members.

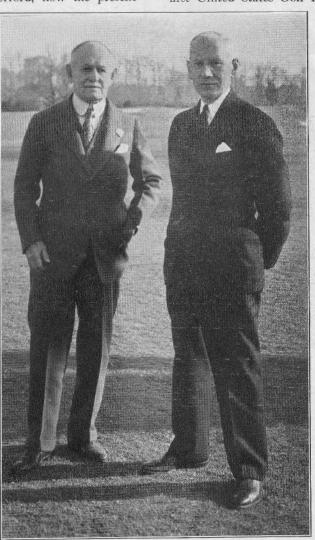

always foremost in sports, were carried along with the tide, and to Charles S. Farnum, Rodman E. Griscom, Alan and Hugh Wilson, Walter B. Stephenson, Charlton Yarnall and Robert W. Lesley the advent of Merion in the field of golf is due. These gentlemen sought proper facilities for golf and organized the Merion Cricket Club Golf Association. Land on the north side of the Pennsylvania Railroad, about a mile from the Merion Cricket Club, was secured and a nine hole course was laid out. An old farm house standing on the property was used as the first club house.

After considerable negotiation the Merion Club management, still devoted to its original love of cricket, was willing, after considerable discussion, to absorb the Merion Cricket Club Golf Association and add this important sport of golf to Merion activities.

In 1898 a small golf house was built, with lockers and baths, and in 1900 when golf became very popular, additional ground was obtained and through the generosity of the late Clement A. Griscom, who gave free use of a large portion of one of his farms, a full eighteen hole course was built. This course in 1909 was the scene of the first United States Golf Association Tournament played on Merion's links. This event was the Women's Amateur Championship which was won by Miss Dorothy Campbell, a Scotch girl, who is now Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, one of Merion's best golfers and winner of many other championships in the United States and abroad, including British, Canadian and Scottish titles; the British in 1909-1911, and the United States in 1909, 1910 and 1924.

With a change in mentality from the early days after this era to the more rapid days of the 1900's, cricket began to slow down and golf to advance in demand and number of players. Consequently when Merion's first golf course was found to be too short for satisfactory championship play, with the development of the rubber cored golf ball, it was necessary to do something of a radical nature. A new location was sought and in 1912 127 acres were purchased on Ardmore Ave., south of the Pennsylvania R. R. and some two miles from the main club house at Haverford. Hugh I. Wilson and his Green Committee laid out Merion's first 18 hole course on the new land and it is what is

GRANTLAND RICE

The Open Championship at Merion

By GRANTLAND RICE.

MERION, with all its traditions, is adding a new and notable chapter to the book of golf. This chapter will be the record of the United States Open Golf championship which, in the way of skill, drama and a well matched field, should be one of the classics of golf. I can recall no other past championship where the class of the field averaged such strength. This includes not only the veterans and the younger pros, but the rush of the amateurs, to sit with Francis Ouimet, Jerry Travers, Chick Evans, Bobby Jones and Johnny Goodman, who have come to this pinnacle of golf.

Merion happens to be not only one of the best championship tests in golf, but one of the finest courses from every viewpoint that ever held an Open championship. More than all it puts a premium upon control and accuracy, which should be the main test. Its perfect greens will lend themselves to the putting touch of such stars as Paul Runyan, Denny Shute, Horton Smith, and others who excel at this vital part of the game, the final scoring stroke.

This field is entirely too open to call for any advance prophesy. There are at least thirty entries equipped with skill and the determination to win, if these three days in June just happen to be their week. Certainly no other field has had as many stars good enough to win. Spectators here will have the chance to see the long hitting of such entries as Jimmy Thompson, Lawson Little, Craig Wood and Johnny Fischer; the fine iron play of such stars as Tommy Armour, Joe Kirkwood, Gene Sarazen and Johnny Goodman; the deadly accuracy of Paul Runyan within spoon range; the effective putting strokes of Paul Runyan, Horton Smith, Denny Shute, Johnny Goodman, Willie Hunter and several others, and the all round consistency of Mac Smith, now making his twenty-sixth start in pursuit of a cup that has always just been within his reach.

The officials at Merion can be counted upon to handle the galleries and give not only the bulk of the spectators but the players a fair chance.

Merion's First Open Championship

By O. B. KEELER

A ND SO we have an open championship, at Merion. You know, for thirty years they have been playing national golfing competitions at this superb course-and this, the thirty-eighth national open championship, is the first of its kind. Three for the ladies; three for the amateurs—and this is the first open. Forgive me if I refer to it as the Blue Ribbon event. Much as I esteem the amateurs—one of them is open champion as this tournament begins-and greatly as I consider the ladies, the open, after all, is the Big Show. And when Johnny Goodman essays the defense of the title he won so brilliantly and courageously at North Shore last summer, he will be firing his shots over historic turf, as well as on one of the finest golf courses in the world today.

Merion-the East Course at Merion! Recollection, always sentimentally inclined, drifts back "across the cosmic reaches," to the earlier forays at Merion; to the autumn of 1904, when the ladies assembled for their national championship, with 86 entries; and Miss Georgianna Bishop defeated Mrs. E. F. Sanford in the final match, to be the champion. Five years, and another women's national - and if you care to collate a little matter of eminent names in American golf, kindly recall that Miss Dorothy Campbell of Great Britain won the championship that year; and Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow was runner-up-and Mrs. Caleb Fox was medalist.

That was in 1909. And will you show me a more distinguished triumvirate today, in anything resembling that setting, in our women's championship?

Seven years, and it was 1916, just before we got into the war, and a slender young man from Chicago, already open champion with a record score—it still is the record; a score of 286—in the open combat at Minikahda, became the first golfer to win both the United States open and the United States amateur in the same season. There still are only two of them. Their names are Charles Evans and Robert Tyre Jones, Jr.

This of course was Chick Evans, while Bobby Jones, a stocky, tow-headed boy of fourteen, was making his bow to the golfing public, winning his first two matches and losing to Bob Gardner, then champion, in the third round.

Eight years later I stood with Chick Evans near the first tee of the East Course at Merion, after the qualifying play for the United States amateur championship of 1924.

Chick had qualified with a very good score—153. He was drawn to meet Rudolph Knepper in the first match; they were all at 36 holes, in those forthright days. And Knepper had narrowly scraped in, on a play-off at 158, for the last place, beating out Cyril Tolley and Dr. Willing and some others.

Chick was in a meditative frame of mind, gazing out across the East Course; meditative, and, it seemed, a bit depressed. He was looking at the batteries of bunkers, snowy white against the emerald setting of the coursefaced to the eyebrows, as they say; snowy sand, all the way to the upper rim.

"The White Faces of Merion," said Chick, as if to himself. "The White Faces of Merion!"

"They smiled on you before," I reminded him.

Chick smiled, himself.

"That seems a long time ago," he said. "I've an idea

they will frown, this time."

And next day the White Faces frowned. And Rudy Knepper beat Chick Evans, 9-7, at the scene of the Chicagoan's triumph of eight years before.

O. B. KEELER

THIS championship marks the 46th major, or national, that O. B. Keeler has covered as a reporter, and the 15th consecutive United States open. Twenty-seven of them were with Bobby Jones—and that's a record, because Mr. Keeler is the only person in the world who saw Bobby win all thirteen of his national championships. He hopes to set a mark of fifty or more before hanging up the old type-writer. Mr. Keeler is sports editor of the Atlanta writer.
Journal.

A couple of years after that I saw Merion well tested in a week consisting largely of rain, climatically, when the ladies played their championship there in 1926, and Mrs. Stetson defeated Mrs. Goss 3-1 in the final round, and I was sentimentally affected to a degree that resulted in a story that appeared later under the title, "Mothers' Day at Merion." The consistently playable condition of the Merion East Course under this persistent precipitation constituted one of the most valid reasons for its selection for major championship competition at any season in any year . . . Incidentally, I witnessed there, in 1926, at the eleventh green and from there in, the most engaging bloodless battle I ever saw on a golf course, after one competitor had insisted on playing a provisional ball out of a bunker where the original ball lay in casual water, and then, dissatisfied with the result, played the original ball out of the water on to the green, winning the hole with that one and losing it with the other, to the utter collapse of her opponent, who was leading, 2 up, at the time.

The Merion East Course! It was there Bobby Jones made his bow, an embarrassed schoolboy of 14, in major competition, in 1916. It was there he won his first national amateur championship, after the "seven lean years," in 1924. It was there he stormed the ultimate rampart of the "impregnable quadrilateral" of golf, in 1930, adding the United States amateur championship to the open, and to the British amateur and open, for the Grand Slam of Golf. That was the last championship, at the scene of the first, that Bobby Jones ever will enter . . . I can fancy a certain mistiness in the eyes of the Atlanta boy, when he stands again at the first tee on the Merion

Merion's East Course

ARNOLD GERSTELL

M OST golf courses are made. Many are built to order. Some grow and develop wholly under conditions of local environment. Others, nurtured over a passage of years under benign influences, come to maturity through an orderly process of evolution. The East Course at Merion is of the latter type.

Fundamentally orthodox in character, it is nevertheless individualistic. In a distinctive way it is quite formal. At the same time it is entirely devoid of formality. Or, more simply perhaps, it may be better said that its lay-out is unconventional.

The distance on the outbound nine overbalances the length of the inbound nine. The 9th green does not, in usual fashion, fetch up at the club house. While the 10th swings fairly close, it is the short 13th that noses in under full view of the east veranda. Then too, there is another deviation somewhat exceptional. As is ordinarily the case, there are two par five holes on the first nine but, at odds with common custom, there is none on the last nine.

It thus happens that the course falls more naturally into three sections of six holes each rather than into the arbitrary 9—9 division as shown on the score card. This variation from the generally accepted standard is not, however, without design.

Accordingly, students of the game familiar with its more technical aspects may find in the Open Champion-ship of 1934 an especial interest in the performance of their favorite players by noting their scores on the first six holes as compared with their record on the second six. And again in what they may do on the last six.

In this connection it is to be observed that the distance on the first six holes foots up to 2565 yards, with an aggregate par of 25. The yardage on the second six holes totals 2025, with a par of 23.

As will be immediately seen, the route on the first six holes is 540 yards longer than on the second six. The player battling against par on the initial stretch has an allowance of two strokes to ride the ball 540 yards. Two shots of 270 yards each is, of course, reasonable enough if—!

But when the player steps up on the 7th tee he is confronted with an abrupt change of pace. On this hole he has two strokes in which to cover 360 yards, granting the regulation two putts. Similarly, on the 8th he has two strokes for 367 yards; on the 9th, one for 185; on the 10th, two for 335; on the 11th, two for 378 and on the 12th, two for 400.

Appearing elsewhere in this program is a detailed description of the course hole by hole. The suggestion here intended is merely this:—Watch the long hitters on the first six. There they have their chance. Keep an eye on the masters of the short game on the second six. It is there that they will have their place in the sun. Check scores on the 12th and then go watch them all play the finishing six because, on these holes, regardless of prowess in style of whatever sort, one qualification, topping all else, is rigorously demanded—namely, Courage.

A glimpse of Merion's picturesque East Course. In the clearing to the right lies the 11th green, while deep in the woods at left can be seen the 12th tee.

MERION'S MAIN CLUB HOUSE AND GROUNDS AT HAVERFORD, PA.

Merion Leads the Way In World of Sports

Merion played its patriotic part in the World War, sending more than 500 members to serve their country. Chevy Chase is stated to have been the only club to surpass this record. Nineteen Merion men made the supreme sacrifice, and their memory is kept ever alive now known as the "East Course." This development soon added so many members to Merion's golf players that some immediate action became necessary to add further to the facilities for golf and a second tract of one hundred and twenty additional acres of land was purchased, and a second eighteen hole course, now known as the "West Course," one of the most beautiful in the country from a scenic standpoint, was created by Hugh I. Wilson and his associates on the Green Committee.

A feature of Merion's golf courses is that they are not immediately adjacent to each other as in the case of many other Clubs having double facilities, but are about a mile apart over an excellent road and served by a Club bus running between the two courses.

In connection with these two courses, both of which are of championship character and have received the most favorable comments in golf circles all over the world, it may be stated that the reason for this successful development is due to the fact that during the period from 1909 to the present day Merion's Green Committee has been kept almost intact from its origin up to today and only five Chairmen of the Green Committee have had charge of the work and development of the courses, thus insuring a consistent, systematic and wise development. These Chairmen were: Hugh I. Wilson, Winthrop Sargent and John R. Maxwell, who are now deceased, and Arnold Gerstell and Philip C. Staples.

The popularity of Merion's golf courses is attested by the fact that four National Tournaments under the auspices of the United States Golf Association—the National Amateur in 1916, and in 1924, the Women's National Championship in 1926 and the Men's Amateur in 1930 have been played, and in 1934 the present Tournament is scheduled. The 1930 Tournament was one of the greatest golf events ever held and successfully run. It was in this event that "Bobby" Jones won his fourth crown to cap his unique career in the world of golf.

While golf was developing, as stated above, tennis was no lagger as a major sport at the Club. For the convenient use of the tennis players thirty grass courts and ten clay courts have been provided; additional land was bought and every facility given for the development of the game and pleasure of the players. Many tennis tournaments have been played and for a number of years the Women's Pennsylvania and Eastern States Tournament, the Men's Pennsylvania State Tournament and the great National Intercollegiate Tournament have been played on the courts at Merion.

In the boom times of 1926 to 1929 Merion, in view of its great development in sports and in country life, felt the need of a new club house of some kind, somewhere and some time. This led to much discussion and finally the decision was made to stay where the club houses then were located and to spend several hundred thousand dollars in reconstructing, refurnishing and adding new lockers to the house at Haverford, while at the Golf house a complete reconstruction was made including locker rooms, refurnishing, etc.

From its pioneer days Merion has never failed to be a leader in all new sports. From a physical standpoint it has provided its members with two of the best golf courses in the United States, with grass courts and clay courts for tennis, already referred to, a bowling green in front of the club house, seven squash courts, playing fields for soccer and hockey, bowling alleys, card and sniff rooms, billiard rooms and trapshooting field. To illustrate, in one class of sports alone, the games played with the ball at Merion are as follows, and facilities exist for all of them: Cricket, tennis, soccer, squash racquets, bowls, ten pins, billiards, pool, ping pong, badminton, hockey, trapshooting and golf.

However, it is not sports alone that have made Merion. It is recognized almost before everything as a "Neighborhood Club." Situated in the heart of the great Main Line district of Suburban Philadelphia, its wonderful location on the railroad and trolley line within twenty minutes of the center of a city of two million people and five minutes from a station to the club are of great moment. Children and youth, young people of both

(Concluded on Page 38)

How times have changed! In the late nineties, when Victorian and Quaker influences held sway, separation of the sexes was in order. A brass rail, dividing the porch of Merion's club house, kept the boys and girls in their proper places.

C O-OPERATING with the Merion Cricket Club in its collosal task of staging the 1934 National Open championship is the Golf Association of Philadelphia, which has behind it a long and interesting history in fostering the links sport.

Merion has been a member of the Philadelphia association since its inception in 1897. In February of that year representatives from four golf organizations, Philadelphia Country Club, Philadelphia Cricket Club, Belmont Golf Association and Merion, met to lay the groundwork for such an association. Two months later plans culminated in the adoption of bylaws, and the election of officers. Arrangements also were made for the first Philadelphia amateur championship, which was won by Albert H. Smith, of the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Original officers of the association were: President, George D. Fowle; vice president, Dr. H. Toulmin; secretary-treasurer, Alan H. Harris; executive committee, George D. Fowle, S. Y. Heebner and L. A. Biddle.

Today more than fifty golf and country clubs are included in the membership, and the organization has widened its sphere of influence to embrace a territory reaching to the seashore of New Jersey, taking in part of Delaware and extending far into the interior counties of Pennsylvania. It has the unique distinction of providing more tournaments for its members than any other association in the country.

The present officers and executive committee are as follows: President, Henry Strouse, Philmont Country Club; Vice President, John Arthur Brown, Pine Valley Golf Club; Secretary-Treasurer, Frank H. Chapman, Whitemarsh Valley Country Club; Robert W. Lesley, Merion Cricket Club; George W. Elkins, Huntingdon Valley Country Club; Fred S. Sherman, Country Club of Atlantic City; Edwin S. (Concluded from Page 33) sexes seek Merion for sports and pleasure. The middle aged and old find its delights. The restaurant, with all its facilities for Sunday night and Thursday night dinner, when the cook is out, is almost a neighborhood institution. When the unexpected guest arrives at a member's home, the latter can send to the club for oysters, chicken salad, terrapin, cigars and cigarettes and all the luxuries that the best town caterers afford.

While Merion's life seems to have been one of sport, pleasure and happiness, it will not do to forget the patriotism of Merion's members. The War made calls upon the loyalty and devotion of Merion men and there were more than 500 engaged in the War and actual war services. It is reported that this was, next to Chevy Chase, the great Washington club, the greatest number of men to enter government service of any country club in the United States. In this period the Board of Government waived nearly $22,000.00 in dues to those patriotic members. Nineteen members laid down their lives for their country; and the club flagstaff's inscription, "They died for their flag," and the names appearing on the reverse side, keep alive the memory of those who sacrificed their lives in upholding the principles that animated the founders of the club and that have been preserved with such integrity to the present time. This memorial to them in the shape of a classic bronze base supporting the flag pole is a landmark at the entrance to the club grounds at Haverford.

HOLE No. 4-595 Yards-Par 5

The objective of the tee shot is over the ridge, keeping to the right of the large trap cut in the face of the hill. A brassie second over a large expanse of sand finishes up on the slope short of the creek which crosses the fairway immediately in front of the green. The creek along with traps at the rear and rough dunes right and left of the green require a deft third shot with plenty of back spin.

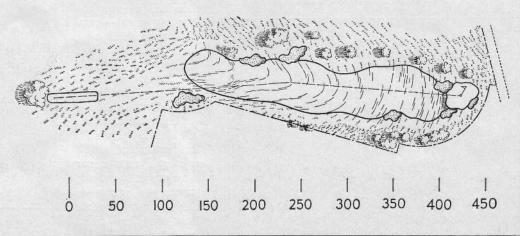

HOLE No. 5-425 Yards-Par 4

The stream skirting the left side of the fairway from tee to green presents somewhat of a hazard off the tee since the best results are obtained with a ball reaching the left side of the fairway. The player holding the left side has the advantage in being able to play his iron shot into the slope of the green which pitches from right to left. It is rather difficult to hold the putting surface with a ball played from the right.

HOLE No. 6-435 Yards-Par 4

A premium is placed on the drive which hugs the right side of the fairway, the left side of the green being partially cut off by a large bunker. A sharp terrace at the green entrance calls either for an all carry shot or a low iron shot with sufficient run to make the terrace.

MERION'S FIRST NATIONAL OPEN

East Course, and looks out across the emerald turf and the "white faces" of the battle-field of his last great victory. Bobby Jones will be there, as he has been at every national amateur championship and every national open championship since he said goodbye, in 1930—at Merion.

FOURTEENTH TEE AND CLUB HOUSE and the second of the second o

Of all the courses on which Bobby played in his thirty-one major competitions, I strongly suspect that Merion — the Merion East Course — is nearest his heart. His debut — his first amateur championship — his last major championship; the fourth side of the Impregnable Quadrilateral — the last card in the Grand Slam, all were at Merion.

Six major events, at Merion, in the last thirty years — and now the seventh, and, if I may be permitted to say so, the Blue Ribbon of world-golf at last; the open championship of the United States, where the White Faces smile or frown; and where par golf nets a par score, but nothing better-or worse-so near as any gauge or test may be called perfect, in this imperfect world of ours.

HOLE No. 7-360 Yards-Par 4

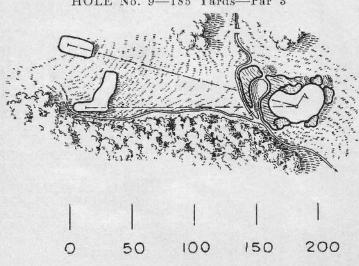

A 240 yard drive to the right along the boundary permits either a pitch or pitch and run shot to this fairly narrow and closely guarded green. Play from the left side is generally from a hanging lie over huge bunkers hugging the green.

HOLE No. 8-367 Yards-Par 4

The well hit accurate tee shot on this hole receives its reward in easing the shot to the green. The green which is the smallest on the course is entirely blocked at the front by a deep sand pit. The second shot, even after a long drive, requires precise manipulation of a niblick or a mashie niblick.

HOLE No. 9-185 Yards-Par 3

This closely guarded one shotter, which is played down hill over a pond at the green edge, ranges from a mashie to an iron, depending on the location of the pin. The severity of the hole increases when played from the left tee, as from this angle the green swings around in back of a large pit that cuts in on the left side.

From a tee high up in the woods the drive must reach a distance of approximately 250 yards in order that the entrance to the heavily trapped green may be opened. The play is to the left from the drive area and the shot to the green is a pitch and run or run-up. Failing to make the necessary distance off the tee, the player must play to a limited landing area on the carpet over a large trap covering the whole left side of the green.

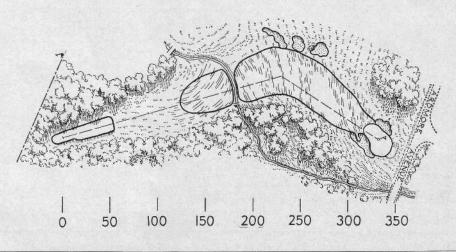

HOLE No. 11-378 Yards-Par 4

On this hole accuracy rather than distance off the tee is essential. The shot pushed or pulled may be stymied by trees, since the green is located in a clearing and the opening to the green begins close to the limit of the drive area. A stream runs diagonally across the line of the second shot and extends around the right side and rear of the green. A most exacting spade or mashie niblick shot with plenty of bite is the par-producing requisite.

HOLE No. 12-400 Yards-Par 4

The drive is from a tee deep in the woods with a compulsory carry over a stream 200 yards away. A tee shot hugging the trees to the right on this elbow hole substantially shortens the distance to the green. An accurate mashie or iron to a green closely guarded right and left with a narrow entrance completes the picture.

Compliments of a Friend

A FRIEND

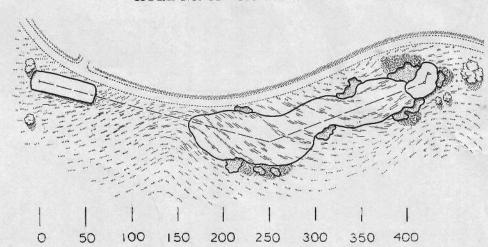

HOLE No. 13-133 Yards-Par 3

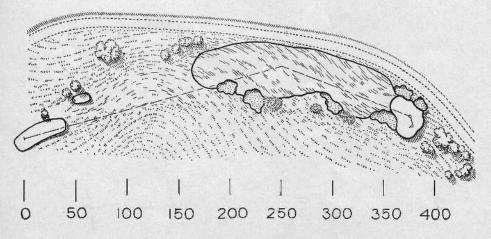

This "Emerald Isle" practically surrounded by sand may easily become a thorn in the side of the best golfer. Woe be to the spade or mashie niblick shot that is not firmly hit.

HOLE No. 14-443 Yards-Par 4

The tee shot up the middle is played slightly away from the roadway boundary. While the green surface is concealed to the second shot, a series of mounds with traps right, left and rear indicate to the player the limits of the green area and a crisply hit iron on the line gets home nicely

HOLE No. 15-395 Yards-Par 4

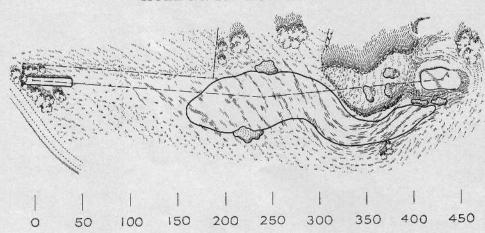

In order to reach a strategic position the drive must carry a bunker at 200 yards, finishing up on the left side of the fairway. From this point the player has the choice of playing a stiff mashie or a low iron shot with enough run to make the upgrade to the green. Play from the right side involves carrying a large deep trap which cuts sharply into the right side of the green.

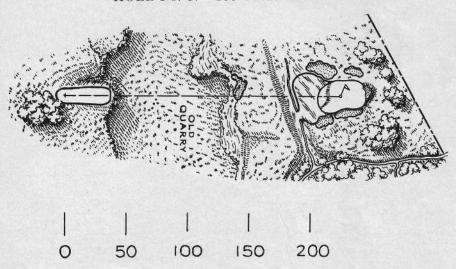

A FRIEND of MERION RIEND of RION

HOLE No. 16-445 Yards-Par 4

From the tee the ground falls away to a lower level, the fairway being flanked right and left by sizable traps. The second shot, a well-hit iron or spoon, must carry a broad, rock-walled depression, the bottom and sides of which are a mass of dunes, sandblown beach grass and Scotch broom. The two-level green stands out boldly above the quarry edge and when the ball drops in for a par the player breathes a sigh of relief.

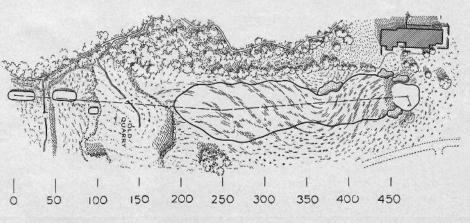

HOLE No. 17-230 Yards-Par 3

High on the brink of the quarry is perched the tee of the testing 17th. A smart spoon or long iron is played across the quarry to a well-bunkered green, the front of which is sharply terraced.

HOLE No. 18-458 Yards-Par 4

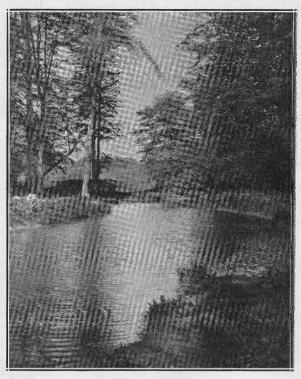

The finish! Reaching the fairway at the far side of the quarry bank calls for a whale of a tee shot, a 210-yard direct carry, uphill all the way. The woods at the left create somewhat of a hazard because of the possibility of pressing in negotiating this big carry off the tee. While a high iron or spoon second may be played, this type of shot is somewhat risky, unless the ball lands on the near edge of the green. The back portion falls away from the play and a bold shot may very easily slide over into heavy rough. A head wind may very likely make the second a brassie shot. Usually the best results are obtained with a fairly low iron shot which lands 10 to 20 yards short and takes the run-up of the gradual slope to the green.

GET A SILVER KING

Confidence is the best club in a championship player's bag. Silver King—the best-known golf ball in the world—helps to inspire confidence. It stands up under hard hitting, doesn't cut easily, never becomes wobbly, and gives you consistently every yard your swing can generate... Silver King's first cousin—King Plus—is a ball for the professional player and the crack amateur. Not as tough as Silver King, but for consistent distance and accurate putting it has no equal. With each of these famous balls now priced at 75 cents, can you think of any reason for swinging at a ball of lesser repute?
